A GRAND PRAYER-MEETING.

An Incident of One of the Fiercest Conflicts of Modern Times.

Correspondence Leaf-Chronicle.

One of the most touching and tragic incidents that ever occurred in any battle marked the last day at Gettysburg—the day Archer and Pickett's men rushed to the jaws of death like the Tenth Legion at Balaklava.

The matchless genius and skill of Lee and Jackson triumphed at Chancellorsville. Then Lee made a bold dash for the enemy's country; at Gettysburg he met the army he had defeated at Chancellorsville, but greatly augmented. Lincoln had displaced Hooker and put Meade, an untried man, in command. Lee was confident of victory.

With "lion fury and lion strength" for two days and nights Lee hurled his legions against Meade's fortified position without dislodging him. On the third day of the battle Lee marshaled his forces for a supreme effort—for a conflict the most fearful and sanguinary since the invention of gun-powder.

When everything was in readiness for the bloody drama soon to begin, word passed along the line that some of the men had been ordered to engage in prayer.

Col. J. M. Lockert, who led the Fourteenth Tennessee regiment in the terrific charge of Cemetery Hill, knew by a certain signal when the battle was to begin, and therefore had time to investigate.

Going a short distance he took position on an eminence from which he could survey the field. It was Pickett's men—the men who rushed into the jaws of death in the immortal charge on Cemetery Hill—who had been ordered to pray, and then on bended knees with bowed heads were earnestly invoking the God of battles to crown this, their supreme effort, with success.

It was a fearful sight to behold, and all who witnessed it say it made an impression that will last to their dying day. To use Col. Lockert's own words:

"I have in time past listened to the utterance of prayer that possibly came only from the lips, and possibly was for the most part intended to be heard only by human ears; but I am sure these at Gettysburg came from earnest and sincere hearts and were intended to be heard and answered only by the Giver of every good and perfect gift. And the men—so warm, so deep, welling up from hearts that were all supplication. I have been present when prayer meetings seemed disturbed only by gentle whisperings, but this meeting was held amid the booming of cannon, the bursting of shells, the blowing up of caissons, the shrieks and cries of the wounded and dying."

Suddenly the earth trembled as if in the throes of an earth quake—the shocks from 500 cannons that opened their mouths and belched forth showers of lead and steel. That was the signal for a grand onslaught; and then ensued the bloodiest conflict in the history, not of our nation alone, but of mankind. The student of history knows the result. It is too dark a picture for a true Southerner to draw; therefore I will throw a veil over it.

Suffice it to say that when the immortal Lee saw that the day was lost and withdrew his shattered and bloodstained legions from that field of blood and carnage, he left nearly all the heroic men who prayed so earnestly and frequently in the cold embrace of death. But few escaped; they had prayed in vain.

When at last night drew her dark mantle over this bloody and fatal field, the elements, as if to imitate man, began warring. The terrific cannonading had charged the air with electricity to a very high intensity, which produced an electrical storm.

Dark clouds gathered over the battlefield; terrific bursts of thunder shook the earth; vivid flashes of lightning shot athwart the sky, and by fits and flashes lit up the ensanguined field below; the clouds opened and the rain fell in torrents, chilling the wounded and dying and mingling with the blood of the slain.

That was the bloody field of Gettysburg—a conflict that set forever the seal of doom on the fate of the South.

Sic transit gloria mundi.

Port Royal, Tenn. W. L. P.

They are nothing in Hopkinsville if not peculiar. We have it on good authority that the latest fad there among the best society is a "shoo rag" and none of the b n ton would think of going out without it. The expression "wipe off your chin," has given place to "wipe off your shoes."

The Bending Works building has been constructed on a more extended plan than at first contemplated, and also arranged for adding large room in the future. It will afford room for 50 or 60 workmen in the start, and will very soon be ready for the machinery.

THE CONVENTION.

Jos. E. Washington Expounds Democracy at the Court House.

The Convention Winding up its Work as the Leaf-Chronicle Goes to Press—The Proceedings.

The county convention for the purpose of selecting delegates to the Congressional Convention which meets at Nashville Sept. 18, and also for selecting delegates to the senatorial and floatorial conventions, hereafter to be called, was called to order at 11 o'clock to-day by H. N. Leech, chairman of the County Democratic Executive Committee. B. J. Corban was elected temporary chairman and M. V. Ingram, Hedley Boyd and J. S. G. Rice were elected temporary secretaries. It was moved and carried by J. J. West that a committee of five be appointed on credentials and a list of representation. The committee was appointed by the temporary chairman as follows: H. N. Leech, H. W. Whitfield, J. F. Ewing, Jno. R. Ussery and J. A. Byrd. When the committee retired to make out a report but calls were made for

JOSEPH E. WASHINGTON.

On taking the stand Mr. Washington said it gave him great pleasure to be with the Democrats of the county who had assembled in convention. He did not come as a delegate, or as a candidate for office. He was called from Washington City to Nashville by telegram, to make speeches in behalf of the Democracy of Davidson county. He had gone through the canvass up there, and by hard ticks had helped snow the Republicans under so deep that they were relegated to the third place, the prohibitionists taking that of second.

Mr. Washington spoke about one hour, and from the way he discussed the leading political issues of the day, one is bound to admit that he has been a very close student, and that he understands every point.

He arraigned the Republican party for its vicious legislation, showing up the iniquity of the McKinley Tariff bill, the Federal Election bill, its pension frauds and several other measures which he denounced in a manner that brought rounds and rounds of applause from his hearers. As the speaker began his attack on the Federal election bill he began pulling off his coat and collar, at the same time apologizing to the audience. Some fellow at the rear of the room told him he could pull off his shirt if he wanted to, but a compromise was made by Mr. Washington getting out of his vest.

There was more enthusiasm manifested throughout the entire speech than has been noticed in political circles in Clarksville for many days. At the close of the speech a round of applause was given the speaker which showed that the Democrats of the county voiced the doctrine they had heard preached.

At the close of Mr. Washington's speech the committee on credentials reported no contests, and recommended the basis of representation be one vote for every 50 votes cast for Cleveland in the last presidential election, and one vote for every fraction of 25 votes, which was adopted. This gives the convention 55 votes.

On motion of Hervey Whitfield, C. P. Warfield was unanimously elected permanent chairman. Mr. Warfield being conducted to the chair, delivered a very timely speech, expressing thanks for the honor conferred, complimented Mr. Washington's speech and counseled harmony and the importance of selecting good men for representatives.

On motion the chair appointed a committee of five to select delegates to the Senatorial, Floatorial and Congressional conventions. T. L. Mabry, J. J. West, B. J. Corban, Jas. Williams and I. P. Howard composed the committee.

On motion of Jas. Williams each district was instructed to send in a list of names to the committee from which to select the delegations.

The convention then adjourned to 2 o'clock.

A SERIOUS ACCIDENT.

A Horse Goes Over an Embankment and Breaks his Back.

An accident happened near the First and Main street crossings this morning which will result in the loss of a horse to W. A. Settle. A negro was driving the horse to a cart loaded with brick, and in attempting to turn around on First street the animal backed the cart over the high embankment and cart and horse went to the bottom, which is at least thirty feet from the top. The horse's back was broken by the fall, which will render him useless should he live. The animal will in all probability die, however, from the fall. The cart was unhurt. Mr. Settle informed a LEAF-CHRONICLE reporter that he would sue the city for the worth of the horse, upon the grounds that such embankments are dangerous and are nuisances where there are no guard rails put up to keep a horse from going over them.

Charlotte is working for a branch road from the Clarksville Mineral. Speaking of the route, the Press says: "A gentleman rode over the proposed branch route from the Campbell farm to Charlotte last week. He is of the opinion that no other five miles of road in the county could be built cheaper. This is certainly an encouraging feature and increases the hope that the building of the branch may soon be definitely agreed upon."
